— Hope —

Have you been hopeful lately? If so, what are you hoping for?

When we share our hopes, we share our stories; the background we emerged from and that shaped us; the dreams and fears that live inside of us, our visions and pictures for the future.

Hope, like art, comes in many forms and shapes. Vibrant and grandiose in powerful speeches, full of confidence and unwavering belief. Other times, hope is silent, almost mute and mostly grey, waiting quietly for you until you finish crying.

Inseparably tied to our imagination, art and hope are deeply intertwined. Both form part of the essence of the human experience, allowing us to envision something better ahead, creating a reason to keep on moving on trying.

We hope that the more than 50 works of this exhibition allow you to connect with your imagination and light a few sparks of hope in you – much needed in this day and age.
